About Actinium

Actinium is a biopharmaceutical company focused on the $50 billion market for cancer drugs. Actinium's most advanced products are Actimab™-A, an antibody-drug construct containing actinium 225 (Ac-225) currently in human clinical trials for acute myeloid leukemia and Iomab™-B, an antibody- drug construct containing iodine 131 (I-131) used in myeloconditioning for hematopoietic stem cells transplantation (HSCT) in various indications. Actinium is currently designing a trial which the company intends to submit for registration approval in HSCT in the settings of refractory and relapsed AML in patients over the age of 50. Actinium is developing its cancer drugs using its expertise in radioimmunotherapy. In addition, the Ac-225 based drugs development relies on the patented APIT platform technology co-developed with Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center, one of Actinium's largest shareholders, through its wholly owned subsidiary. The APIT technology couples monoclonal antibodies (mAb) with extremely potent but comparatively safe alpha particle emitting radioactive isotopes, in particular actinium 225 and bismuth 213. The final drug construct is designed to specifically target and kill cancer cells while minimizing side effects. Actinium intends to develop a number of products for different types of cancer and derive revenue from partnering relationships with large pharmaceutical companies and/or direct sales of its products in specialty markets in the U.S.
