Our Request

Jones Lang LaSalle is requesting shareholder approval of a new share authorization of 3 million additional shares for its Stock Award and Incentive Plan (SAIP)

We believe our use of equity-based incentives has contributed to our financial success for shareholders and will continue to be important for motivating and rewarding key employees in the future

We expect institutional investment advisors to recommend voting against the request as a result of our:

3-year average burn rate

current overhang

classification with REITs

JLL Employee Equity Compensation Philosophy

The JLL compensation system rewards:

Profit performance

New Business and Client development

Client Satisfaction

Our compensation system design includes salary, bonus, and stock-based programs.

Differs from real estate industry practice, which generally uses commissions

Stock-based programs align employee and shareholder interests while also fostering retention

We believe our model provides stronger, long-term value proposition to shareholders, clients and employees

Stock Ownership Program (SOP)

Over 700 key employees annual cash bonuses are reduced by 10% to 20% to purchase restricted stock units (RSUs)

Primary objectives retention of key talent and alignment with firm goals

50% of RSUs vest after 18 months and remainder after 30 months

25% uplift of deferred amount in additional shares

Use of stock options discontinued in 2003

SAIP Shareholder Benefits

The SAIP has benefited our Shareholders:

RSUs and SOP focus employees and directors on long-term Jones Lang LaSalle stock and financial performance

SOP puts significant skin in the game for hundreds of key employees

Balanced focus on annual vs. long-term performance results

Low voluntary turnover

Strong stock and financial performance

Share Usage

Recent Share Usage

In 2004, JLL granted 3.0% of common stock outstanding in RSUs, including SOP, to key employees and outside directors (burn rate trending down)

1.8% represented SOP shares purchased with a portion of annual bonuses of key employees, including the associated 25% uplift

1.2% represented grants of RSUs comparable to long-term incentives granted at other companies

Grants as a % of Common Stock Outstanding

Corporate Governance

Henri-Claude de Bettignies

Sir Derek Higgs

Sheila A. Penrose

Only one of six members of the Board is an Executive officer

Board recommends shareholder approval of the new share authorization for SAIP

Competitive Comparisons

Following charts compare our equity usage with similarly-sized companies in multiple industries in which we compete

Similarly-sized companies' revenues between 1/3 to 3 times Jones Lang LaSalle's revenues

Note: showing 2004 data for Jones Lang LaSalle and 2003 data for comparator companies (2004 not yet available)

Comparison to REITs not appropriate

Profit distribution through dividends instead of stock price appreciation

Limited use of equity-based compensation

Equity Usage Comparisons Multiple Industries

2003 Burn Rate (see notes)

[GRAPH]

Notes:

Burn rate = equity grants made during FY 2003 / common stock outstanding
Jones Lang LaSalle numbers reflect FY 2004 data

Total Overhang (see Notes)

Notes:

Overhang = sum of stock options/SARs granted and outstanding - shares available for future grants - common stock outstanding
Jones Lang LaSalle overhang as of FY2004; other companies as of FY2003

Additional Considerations

Jones Lang LaSalle considers RSUs used in SOP to be more akin to employee stock purchase plans

Jones Lang LaSalle repurchases shares on the open market to minimize dilution impact of equity-based compensation
