IBM PLANS TO ACQUIRE MERGE HEALTHCARE

Combining with IBM is exciting news, and – once the transaction has closed – can enable Merge to serve you even better. Joining together our strength as a leader in healthcare image handling and processing, interoperability and clinical systems, with IBM’s powerful Watson Health Cloud cognitive and analytic capabilities can enable us to expand the reach and effectiveness of our solutions.

Like us, IBM Watson Health is striving to expand the reach and effectiveness of healthcare insight solutions through innovative solutions based on medical imaging and other data sources, with applied cognitive analytics to derive deeper insights.

The vision is that healthcare providers will be able to use the Watson Health Cloud to surface new insights from a consolidated, patient-centric view of current and historical images, electronic health records, data from wearable devices and other related medical data, in a secure environment.

In short – this will help us serve you better.

What People Are Saying

“IBM's $1 billion purchase of Merge Healthcare should be a boon for the Chicago-based health tech company, giving it greater branding power and deeper pockets to ward off competitors and shape the future of medicine.”

- Crain’s Chicago Business

“...having a company like IBM as your new owner really eliminates any concern a potential customer might have about the company's long-term viability.”

- Matthew Gillmor, Robert W. Baird analyst

“It’s a great affirmation of the innovation and creativity coming out of the Chicago market...Truly what impressed IBM was not only the intellectual property associated with the services [Merge] provide[s], but the talent of the individuals that represent the organization.”

- Stephen Gold, IBM Watson Vice President

“With the combination of Watson’s powerful cognitive computing engine and huge amount of healthcare data (all cloud-based) and Merge Healthcare’s world-class technology platform for sharing medical images (such as CAT scans and mammographies), Watson will now be able to also SEE, helping doctors make decisions efficiently and effectively.”

- Panos Mourdoukoutas, Forbes

To valued customers and friends of Merge eClinical:

We're excited to share with you today the announcement of an important milestone in Merge Healthcare history: Our organization, including the eClinical Division, entered into an agreement under which, subject to regulatory review, Merge shareholder approval and satisfaction of customary closing conditions, we will be acquired by IBM. Upon closing, our company's solutions will, over time, become integrated with the IBM Watson Health [<http://www.ibm.com/smarterplanet/us/en/ibmwatson/health/>] platform.

What does all this mean for you?

First and foremost, your day-to-day experience with our team and our products--whether you use eClinicalOS (eCOS), CTMS for Investigators or both--will remain the same. You've come to rely on the powerful capabilities and ease of use of our software, and we have no intention of changing that (those attributes, after all, were among the many that made our solutions so attractive to IBM).

Your existing Merge account manager will continue to be your main point of contact and spearhead the extraordinary customer service that's become one of our industry hallmarks.

Your team and ours will have opportunities to advance smarter clinical research through the unique cognitive and analytic capabilities available exclusively through Watson Health. ("Amazing" doesn't even begin to describe them.)

Until the transaction closes, which we expect will be later this year, Merge Healthcare (including its Merge eClinical group) will remain an independent company. Our plans call for the Merge management team to remain in place both throughout and following the acquisition.

You can learn more about last week's announcement here [<http://www.merge.com/News/Article.aspx?ItemID=660>], and we'll be sure to keep you posted on future developments.

As always, thank you for your business and support, and I wish you continued success.

Zaher El-Assi
President, eClinical
