Con Mine History Book Completed

VANCOUVER Miramar Mining Corporation announced today the successful re-start of the autoclave at the Con Mine on May 6, 2007 as part of its ongoing reclamation activity at the mine in Yellowknife. The autoclave will process all of the remaining arsenic bearing sludges and calcines left on site from historic roaster operations prior to Miramar's ownership of the mine. This process will generate an environmentally safe and stable arsenic mineral called scorodite. This final stabilization of all of the remaining arsenic sludges and calcines is expected to be completed in the third quarter of 2007 paving the way for the final cleaning and demolition of the surface processing facilities at the Con Mine (the Blend Plant, the Mill and the Autoclave) in late 2007 or early 2008.

After a four year period and the contributions of a working group comprised of technical experts representing the federal and territorial governments, the City of Yellowknife, the Stanton Regional Health Board, local Aboriginal groups and other stakeholders, the Closure and Reclamation Plan for Con Mine was approved by the McKenzie Valley Land and Water Board.

Although mining at the Con has come to an end, we look forward to continuing our partnership with the City of Yellowknife, the Northwest Territory and its constituents for many years to come. We endeavour to maintain a high level of environmental stewardship in all of our activities and operations.

Miramar also announced today the launch of a website dedicated to communicating the status and progress of reclamation at the Con Mine to all residents of Yellowknife and to the public at large. This site can be accessed at the following internet address: <http://www.conmine.ca/s/Home.asp>. Miramar also congratulates the N.W.T. Mining Heritage Society on their publication of a new history book entitled Con Mine - A Pictorial History. It is more than just a history book in that the book was designed primarily as a photo history combined with stories of the many people who lived and worked at the Con. The book will be distributed to former and current Con employees (many of which contributed to the book with their stories and photographs). The book will also be sold as a fundraising vehicle
