» Learning Hands-Only CPR to the Sounds of Disco at DFW

As you walk by Gate 7 in DFW Airport's Terminal C, you may hear the '70s disco song "Stayin' Alive." Why? People will be learning Hands-Only CPR to save lives. The popular Bee Gees song provides the perfect beat for administering cardiopulmonary resuscitation. Occupational Health Services (AA Medical) joined forces with the American Heart Association to place the CPR training kiosk at the airport. The device helps people get hands-on practice with an actual CPR mannequin and interactive video program. "The more lifesavers we have, the better off we all are," said Dr. Jeral Ahtone, area medical director for LAX, HDQ and TUL. AA Medical held a beta test for the kiosk earlier this year at HDQ. International Demand Boosts Revenue at American

Demand for international travel boosted traffic and a key revenue measure at American last month. Parent AMR Corp. said passenger revenue for every seat flown one mile rose 1.7 percent in June to a record 14.39 cents. That statistic is a closely watched measure of pricing power in the airline business, because airlines can increase revenue per seat by charging higher average fares. AMR said that passengers on American and regional subsidiary American Eagle flew 12.46 billion miles last month, up 2.4 percent from 12.17 billion miles in June 2012. The airlines raised passenger-carrying capacity even faster, however, by 2.6 percent, so the average flight was 86.9 percent full, down slightly from 87.1 percent a year earlier. Domestic flights, however, were more crowded than in June 2012. Traffic across the Atlantic declined 1.8 percent, but traffic to and from Latin America rose 10.1 percent, and Asia Pacific traffic jumped 12.2 percent.

British Airways 787s to Fill Asian Gaps Using 12 London Heathrow Slots

British Airways plans to utilize its new fleet of Boeing 787 Dreamliners to develop a series of long-haul destinations in untapped markets using a dozen pairs of takeoff and landing slots at its London Heathrow hub. BA acquired 42 Heathrow slots with last year's purchase of short-haul operator bmi and has reserved 12 for intercontinental services. The 214-seat 787-8s are well-suited to trialing destinations where initial demand may be modest. The oneworld carrier, a unit of International Consolidated Airlines Group (IAG), has ordered 42 Dreamliners for delivery by 2021, including 12 of the largest -10 variant, due to arrive from 2018. The 787-8 will debut on the Heathrow-Toronto route on Sept. 1, with services to Newark commencing a month later. British Airways will initially operate both the Dreamliner and the Airbus A380 on short-haul trips to ease their introduction.

Berlin Airport Operator Looks at Partial Move

Berlin's airport operator Flughafen Berlin Brandenburg plans to announce the latest schedule for opening Berlin Brandenburg International Airport in October and may move a small part of the operation to the new facility by the end of the year. The city's new airport was intended to be opened in early 2012 according to the last official schedule following two earlier delays. But the move from the existing airports in Tegel and Schonefeld was called off only weeks before the opening because of construction flaws that led local authorities not to approve it. Since then construction work has essentially stopped at the new site. The idea of keeping Tegel open indefinitely even after Brandenburg operations have started was raised, but that proposal has hit massive political opposition in the city as well as by airberlin, which is trying to develop a Berlin hub. Keeping two airports open would also likely lead to higher landing fees because of the overall cost increase.
