It is my pleasure to let you know we have just announced that Zillow has entered into a definitive agreement to acquire Trulia. You can read the full press release here.

I am really excited about this opportunity, but I am sure the news will lead to a number of questions. The most important thing I can stress is that this combination of companies sets the stage for us to offer even more real estate tools and services to empower consumers, and has the potential to drive even more business to the local real estate agents and brokers to whom your organization provides vital services. You will also find this makes us a better-resourced collaborator when it comes to meeting your needs and providing innovative partnership opportunities.

We expect to maintain both the Zillow and Trulia consumer brands, as both will continue to offer buyers and sellers access to vital information about homes and real estate, providing an important bridge to local agents across the country. We will work hard to make sure the great partnerships we have with MLSs nationwide continue to prosper.

This acquisition requires shareholder and regulatory approval, which might take several months. We will provide additional details as they become available. For now, it is business as usual for both companies. Our daily focus and strong commitment to local agents and professionals in the real estate industry remain unchanged and of the utmost importance to our entire team.

Please contact our team at partners@zillow.com with any questions.

Spencer Rascoff
Zillow CEO
