Edgar Filing: CYANOTECH CORP - Form SC 13D

|------------------|-------------------|--|
| Amendment No. 12 | February 15, 2017 | Discussion of Meridian's decision to drop Cyanotech from the ongoing litigation in order to protect shareholders from bearing the cost of defending Davis' actions |
| Amendment No. 13 | August 1, 2017 | Review of the status of litigation relating to Davis' alleged federal securities reporting violations, and discussion of a potential "secret agenda" being pursued by the long-secret partners, Davis and RSF. |
| Amendment No. 14 | February 14, 2018 | Review of Cyanotech's great potential yet poor performance under the leadership of its Chairman, Michael Davis |

The following supplements the information provided in the Prior Filings.

Meridian Has Ended the Litigation

Meridian has decided to withdraw its lawsuit against Michael Davis, Cyanotech's chairman of the board and the company's largest shareholder, and Rudolf Steiner Foundation ("RSF"), Cyanotech's second largest shareholder and a very close long-term associate of Davis. Meridian is ending its action because it believes the litigation is no longer necessary and that it is not the best or most expedient path to the wholesale reform desperately needed at Cyanotech.

Meridian initiated its legal action against Davis and RSF in 2016 in Federal district court as part of an effort to force Cyanotech's two largest shareholders to begin complying with Federal securities laws, specifically Section 13(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the "1934 Act"). The litigation was triggered by the surprise discovery of evidence indicating that Davis had secretly accumulated a 33% control stake in Cyanotech and then concealed that fact by "parking" hundreds of thousands of shares with RSF. Meridian believed that if such conduct was confirmed, it would constitute a gross violation of the 1934 Act and, among other things, disqualify Davis from continuing to serve as a director of the company. Meridian commenced the litigation only after determining that Cyanotech's other directors would not take appropriate action (See Amendment No. 2 and Amendment No. 3, which contains a link to the litigation filings, including Meridian's May 6, 2016 letter to Cyanotech's board of directors).

Meridian's Investigation

Since its discovery of Davis' long-concealed activities, Meridian has been seeking to uncover the motivations behind Davis' inexplicable and unexplained activities relating to Cyanotech. As its investigation revealed new facts, Meridian shared its findings with Cyanotech shareholders via the series of Schedule 13D filings summarized above. Many of Meridian's discoveries came as a result of information grudgingly disclosed by Davis and RSF, when those shareholders finally began making their legally-required SEC filings as part of an effort to moot Meridian's continuing litigation (See Amendments No. 6 and No. 7). From a securities law perspective, Meridian believes the disclosures coerced out of Davis and his accessory, RSF, are devastating. There really can be no reasonable argument against the fact that Davis and RSF are a "group" under the 1934 Act, that they have been operating secretly as a "group" since at least 2011, and that the two colluded to conceal their coordinated activities until found out by Meridian in 2016 and forced, via Meridian's litigation, to correct the record.

Consequences

With the truth finally revealed, Meridian sees no reason to continue the lawsuit – Davis and RSF have been compelled into making the required disclosures and there are no material facts left to be litigated. What is left is determining the consequences for two shareholders secretly colluding to control a public company while working in concert to conceal that fact via systematic violations of the 1934 Act. Requiring disclosure of material facts is the primary purpose of the 1934 Act, and the reporting of potentially controlling shareholdings is the specific requirement of Section 13(d).

Meridian believes that a civil action brought in a Federal district court in the state of Nevada is not the best forum for determining the consequences for a public company chairman of the board caught in serious 1934 Act violations –proper adjudication for what is to be done and what consequences will fall, lies with the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) and the Department of Justice (“DOJ”).

Meridian believes the SEC should and hopefully will take interest in the long-secret activities now exposed at Cyanotech. A partial list of the likely securities and/or governance failures presented by the secret Davis/RSF collusion at Cyanotech include:

- Davis and RSF colluding to conceal the existence of a 33% control group from at least 2011 to 2018
- The systematic failure by Davis and RSF to make required ownership disclosures on Schedule 13D until forced to do so by the Meridian litigation
- Davis and RSF improperly using Schedule 13G
- The systematic failure by Davis to comply even with the lesser disclosure requirements of Schedule 13G
- Davis' one-sided filing for required Form 4 disclosures starting in 2010, thereby reporting his purchases but not his transfers to RSF
- Davis' failure to disclose that, while serving as chairman of the board of a public company, he arranged and financed the VitaeLabs transaction that catapulted RSF to become Cyanotech's second largest shareholder
- Davis' apparent "parking" of securities with RSF to avoid the 20% ownership limitation of IRC Section 4943
- RSF's participation in Davis' apparent "parking" transactions
- RSF's failure to disclose that its purchase of the VitaeLab block was directed and financed by Davis, who was at the time chairman of the board of directors of the issuing company
- RSF's failure to disclose that it is not the beneficial owner of the Cyanotech shares that it holds, but that it holds the shares in a donor advised fund (the so-called living capital fund) for the benefit of Ginungagap Foundation, an entity managed and 100% financed by Davis
- Cyanotech's failure to diligence and cause its chairman of the board to make proper and accurate ownership filings
- Cyanotech's failure to disclose that its chairman of the board and largest shareholder operated in a "group" with the company's second largest shareholder
- Cyanotech's directors' fiduciary failure to protect the company and shareholders by taking appropriate action when Davis' activities were specifically revealed to them
- Cyanotech's directors' fiduciary failure in incurring significant costs financing Davis' defense in litigation relating to his long-term failure to comply with the 1934 Act

It is hard to imagine a more egregious violation of the 1934 Act and accompanying director/control shareholder disclosure and fiduciary duties. These are incredibly basic and fundamental issues of securities law and public company disclosure. In addition to his own counsel, Davis has had, for the last 16 years, the benefit of Cyanotech's corporate counsel for advice on securities laws and governance issues. It seems impossible that Davis did not know better, that his actions, and those of RSF, were not knowing and premeditated.

Meridian is withdrawing its legal action in Federal district court so that there can be no confusion or distraction on the proper remedy. The public markets cannot work when critical disclosure and reporting requirements are undermined, particularly by corporate insiders and control shareholders. The SEC exists to promulgate and enforce rules designed to protect public market investors. Those rules are not advisory, they are not optional. If the Davis/RSF conduct can be allowed to stand without penalty, then that conduct will stand as an open and notorious flouting of the law, and an example and motivator for future bad actors to follow.

This filing contains "forward-looking statements" within the meaning of the federal securities laws. All statements other than statements of historical facts contained in this report, including statements regarding Meridian's beliefs about Cyanotech's prospects, product market position, future revenues and future stock price, are forward-looking statements.
