RIVERSTONE TALK POINTS

>> The U.S. Bankruptcy Court of Delaware has granted an order approving Lucent's purchase of the assets of Riverstone Networks, a current partner and provider of carrier-grade Ethernet routing solutions for the telecommunications industry. The purchase price under the amended agreement is $207 million. The court order is subject to an objection period of 10 days following its entry, which occurred on March 23, 2006. In addition, the closing of the transaction remains subject to the receipt of certain regulatory approvals in Germany, which the company anticipates could happen early in April. Lucent received Federal Trade Commission approval of the purchase on March 17, 2006.

- >> Lucent is focused on providing customers with next-generation networking solutions that help them evolve their networks to become more efficient and to offer a growing variety of compelling, useful new services to their customers.
- >> In order to expand our revenues and profitably grow the business, we have been aggressively pursuing opportunities in next-gen transport solutions, including carrier-grade Ethernet, to help service providers deliver high-margin multimedia transport services to their subscribers.
- >> Riverstone Networks is already a Lucent partner. Riverstone products are currently being sold as part of our multimedia transport solutions. Customers are familiar with how the Riverstone portfolio complements the Lucent portfolio, and recognize the role the Riverstone portfolio can play in the further evolution of next-generation network architectures.
- >> This purchase also gives Lucent the opportunity to more efficiently bring solutions and technologies from Riverstone into our existing portfolio.
- >> In order to profitably grow Lucent's business, we continue to look at organic development, partnerships and acquisitions. The pursuit of Riverstone follows along the lines of Lucent's acquisition of Telica in 2004, which expanded our portfolio with a proven, scalable product that meshed well with the next-gen solutions we are already providing our customers.
- >> In addition, Lucent is evaluating opportunities to leverage key assets and technologies from the acquisition by embedding them into our broader portfolio.
- >> This acquisition strengthens Lucent's Multimedia Network Solutions portfolio, and enables us to more rapidly integrate carrier-grade Ethernet technology into our future data and optical multimedia transport solutions.
- >> Riverstone products will play a key role in advancing Lucent's end-to-end converged Ethernet/optical solutions, helping Lucent take a share of an Ethernet carrier market estimated to be more than $7 billion per year (Infonetics) by 2008.
- >> Riverstone adds a talented, global team of approximately 400 people to Lucent who have sold a proven product to more than 70 domestic and international customers for a wide range of multimedia and mobility applications.
- >> This acquisition brings Lucent: a carrier-grade, stand-alone Ethernet router, an Ethernet access router and a comprehensive suite of next-generation software that can support Lucent's Ethernet/optical products.
