3. Reasons for Revision of Forecast

(1) Consolidated financial forecast

The European market, which accounts for more than 40% of the consolidated net sales, has shown signs of modest recovery. During the second half of this fiscal year, the demand in the North America market has risen gradually compared with our previously forecast. Accordingly, it is expected that net sales exceeding the forecast will be recorded.

Since the operating rates of our production sites have increased in line with the recovery of demand, resulting in the decreasing cost of sales ratio, it is expected that profits will also improve. Accordingly, the forecasts of consolidated performance for the fiscal year ending March 2010 announced on October 27, 2009 are revised as shown above.

The above forecast is based on the assumption of exchange rates of 90 yen to the U.S. dollar and 130 yen to the euro for the fourth quarter of the fiscal year.

(2) Non-consolidated financial forecast

The global demand for power tools, which has remained weak due to the world recession that began two years ago, shows signs of gradual recovery mainly in overseas markets.

Since the operating rates of our production sites have increased and the ratio of cost of sales has improved, profits of the Company are expected to improve. Accordingly, the forecasts of non-consolidated performance for the fiscal year ending March 2010 announced on July 31, 2009 are revised as shown.

FORWARD-LOOKING STATEMENTS

This document contains forward-looking statements based on Makita's own projections and estimates.

The power tools market, where Makita is mainly active, is subject to the effects of rapid shifts in economic conditions, demand for housing, currency exchange rates, changes in competitiveness, and other factors.

Due to the risks and uncertainties involved, actual results could differ substantially from the content of these statements. Therefore, these statements should not be interpreted as representation that such objectives will be achieved.
