SMITH & NEPHEW APPOINTS ENDOSCOPY PRESIDENT

22 September 2003

Smith & Nephew plc today announces the appointment of Jim Taylor as President of its Endoscopy business.

Mr Taylor, 47, joined Smith & Nephew in 2000 as a Group Director responsible for 25 country markets for the Orthopaedics, Endoscopy and Wound Management businesses. He is a current member of the Smith & Nephew Group Executive Committee.

Mr Taylor, who will be based at Endoscopy Division headquarters in Andover, Massachusetts, has wide executive experience in the medical devices arena and a strong background in global business operations. His experience encompasses several roles at DePuy, including President of DePuy International, as well as positions in the automotive industry.

He replaces former divisional president Ron Sparks, who left the company earlier this month to take over as Chief Executive Officer of UTI Corporation in Philadelphia.

Smith & Nephew Chief Executive Chris O'Donnell said "Jim Taylor has consistently shown leadership and strong results in building Smith & Nephew's international business. He understands the Endoscopy sector well and I have every confidence that he will be a strong leader for this business."
