Item 8.01 Other Events.

On April 13, 2012, in the case of Boeing Satellite Systems International Inc. v. ICO Global Communications (Operations) Ltd, the California Court of Appeal reversed all monetary judgments entered by the trial court in favor of ICO Global Communications (Operations) Ltd ( ICO Operations ), and directed ICO Operations to reimburse Boeing for its costs, but not fees, on appeal, which could be substantial. ICO Operations, a subsidiary of Pendrell Corporation based in the Cayman Islands, was the entity that owned and operated, directly and indirectly, ICO's international medium earth orbit satellite assets and operations. ICO Operations did not own or operate any of DBSD's United States based satellite assets or operations that were sold to Dish Network earlier this year. All of ICO Operations' medium earth orbit satellite assets were divested in the first quarter of this year for nominal consideration, with the exception of the in-orbit F2 satellite. ICO Operations and its subsidiaries hold no material assets. Pendrell Corporation issued a press release announcing the decision, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit 99.1 and incorporated by reference herein.
